WHEN money becomes cheap, strange to say, business seems to improve. And when France officially cut the value of the franc down to 100 francs to the pound, that was "as though" the French government had reduced the value of a dollar to 100 cents.

France then proceeded to pay her debts with money worth only 10 cents to the pound that had paid.

Englishmen, who were sorely taxed for loans that had been made to France, were worth only 10 cents to the pound.

Frenchmen, who had bought

Brisbane, their country's in money of the same kind, getting back 50 cents on the dollar, which is as though the French government would suddenly drop 300 on $100.

Did the rains stop? No except since the franc was knocked down, the French have accumulated nearly three billions of gold metal.

France has prospered enormously, with absolutely no unemployment.

Abuses Prove Jobless Registration Unreliable

UNSCRUPULOUS DRIFTERS ARE BIG OFFENDERS

Workers, Still Employed, Sign in Fear of Losing Jobs. Report Says

Canadian Press

OTTAWA, Oct. 22.—The Mail and Empire letter published the following special dispatch from Ottawa:

"Half a million jobless registered in half a dozen or more centres and that thousands of other men, though not officially registered, during the last year have been denied federal assistance to the conclusion that their attempts at registration were nothing more than a failure."—Letter of Senator Olden to the Minister of Labour, to the National Council of Women, in which the ministerialist was quoted as having given confirmation of an impression which is known to be widespread among the public.

NEEDY CHEATED

It is regarded as unquestionable that the registration was so much misused, though it is not clear how it was done.

It is known that many of those employed, though not officially registered, "had been cheated by the many who misrepresented them."

Among farm laborers, it is reported, many who may have been employed at the time of the census, would have registered as unemployed. So many of these cases were found that officials were obliged to admit that the census was a failure.

Most of his dramatic works have been produced in New York, but Curtis' first experiments, played at the "Green Cockade" in which Alexander Woollcott was a partner, were a success.

"None But the Brave," which was translated into English under the title

"None But the Brave," is his most recently produced play.

BATTLED CENSUS

Dr. Schmitz had some trouble with the census in various parts of the country, but was freed from the stage in several cases by the intervention of Senator Charles Curtis.

He has a son, a daughter, a son-in-law, and a son and daughter-in-law, who was married to an Italian actor, committed suicide a year ago.

THE ISSUE SETTLED

The Privy Council has decided that the Dominion is not required to compensate Alberta and Saskatchewan for public lands lying within their boundaries which were taken before the provinces were created. There had clearly been much disappointment in that decision, at either provincial capital. The argument was rather far-fetched at best, and in point of fact, to which the case was submitted.

As an offset to the revenue that was thus gathered into the Dominion treasury, the national government administered law, provided order, protected life and property, maintained mail and built telephone lines and assured railway construction throughout the "great lone land" in years when it scattered handfuls of people could by no means have had these services. The revenues derived from the public resources did not meet these expenses over the period up to 1905, or any substantial part of them.

RECRUITING THE SURVIVORS

"Wages must be paid, according to work done," is the motto of the men who, in this, is not the language of a private employer of labor, trying to justify himself for paying one man more or less wages than another. Nor of an economic hermit, seeking to formulate an ideal plan for the improvement of the joint production of industry.

They are the words of Stalin, director-general of the Russian Soviet Union. They embody the result of his experience over seven years in trying to fit the communist party's aims into the available economic power to enforce his edicts. They were used in the course of a speech in which the Red leader told his followers that an engineer survivor from the Czarist regime might as well return to Russia than a workman in the most approved brand of Bolshevik sentiment.

These remnants are being recruited into the economic forces of the Soviet Union, and with stipulation that they must profess conversion to communism, and on the basis that they are to be paid according to the service they can render. The proletariat may not like that, but what Stalin "goes."

THE IRREDUCIBLE MINIMUM

The major bulk of wages are to be submitted to the burghers on polling day total only $229,000, against a total of $476,000 submitted last year in addition to the school salary for $75,000. This is certainly a reduction of the total wage. Obviously communists and control have cut the estimates to the limit that is consistent with any attempt to carry on the general improvement program.

The bulk of the proposed expenditure is ear-marked for street improvement, some $10,000. Linked with this question is that of reconstructing the street railway, the longest stretch marked for rebuilding being on 11th avenue. This train has been in use for more than two years, and safety, as well as economic operation and satisfactory service, demands that it be replaced.

There is included a vote of $10,700 for park improvement, a heading under which the park has been granted only $10,000 all since the greater days, as impressively illustrated by the condition of some of the open spaces which are, perhaps in irony, called city parks. There is an application for $20,000 for a new fire station and site, and $30,000 for a new telephone system, including radio sets in police cars.

It is as true this year as it was last that the city were to shut down construction of works in the summer. Interests of economy there would have to be a sharp increase in the cutlay for direct relief. Conditions being as they are, there is no possible doubt on that score, and the city is in a position to do, especially before next summer. With due attention to that fact, there should be no possibility whatever of this exceedingly modest improvement program failing of approval at the polls.

BEAUCHARNOIS UP TO DATE

Speaking at the convention of the Ontario Liberal Association, Right Hon. Mackenzie King gave a detailed resume of the history of the Beaucharnois company and the parliamentary investigation which grew out of the financial difficulties of prominent members of that company.

Whether that was necessary may be doubted, since most of the facts are still fresh in the public mind as the result of the recent trial at the provincial court of session. The speech, however, serves to bring out two or three points of continuing importance.

One is that the King Government appears to have planned the company in March, 1929, while it was not until a year and a half later that the contributions were made. Nor was anything introduced at the parliamentary inquiry to show that the contributions would be forthcoming, while Mr. King explicitly denies that there was any such bargain.

Another point brought to attention is that Mr. King had received a contribution from the company, or its promoter, to the funds of the Conservative party on the ground that he was pledged to stage a judicial inquiry into the company and its affairs. The public are entitled to know why that pledge has not been kept, and it is well to keep it.

Nor has the Beaucharnois company been put through the redemptive reconstruction that was to eliminate the financial queer-workers, protect the investors, and to provide a better life for the workers and safeguard the public. According to carrying on as per usual, except that they are planning to take more water from the St. Lawrence river than the late government allowed them to take.

Gandhi
By GLENN FRANK

Malibata, Gandhi, in the ascetic simplicity of his loin cloth, masking back and forth between the shadows of the trees and the bright sunlight of the sun, is a picture of power, perhaps the greatest single personal force in the modern world.

Yesterday I promised to try to interest him in the use of the machine civilization of the West. That does not mean that, if you regard the dream as a dream, you can accept it, but only that you are to arrange to realize it.

It is a social pacifist's dream, he is more generally a dreamer, striking a sleep-dream behavior like a child, and the dream is unpleasant and deals with fears and anxiety, and with the dreamer's fears, and with many fears with which we are faced.

He is a social pacifist, a dreamer, a machine civilization will continue, in its maturing, perhaps, as a dream, and the dreamer makes of tools independent of his own.

An over-speeding that leaves men with no time to think, no time to work, no time to consider.

A man's production that puts quantity above quality.

A system of production and products that stamps its name on every article.

It is a social pacifist, a dreamer, a machine civilization will continue, in its maturing, perhaps, as a dream, and the dreamer makes of tools independent of his own.

Mr. B. K. Sandwell Addresses Women's Canadian Club

If members of the Women's Canadian Club in England were here, Mr. Sandwell considered the natural result of considering unemployment insurance as a natural result of unemployment, as it is working at present in England, they were there, were there, and convincing them to do the same. Women's Club, however, Regrettably the fact that he was not there, but rather than on a humerous topic, he was an eminent Canadian economist, humorist and writer, who was able to make very clear indeed the idea of unemployment insurance in a half hour's address at the tea arranged by the club in his honour. The tea was a great success, produced in happy memory by Dean W. A. Kerr, a former Upper Canada man, who has been a great friend to his subject with enthusiasm.

He has successfully operated in Germany with the scheme and politically minded.

Unless one felt that it was possible to make life too comfortable for the unemployed, he would not be in favour of unemployment insurance, as it was not to be eliminated in planning the social security of the country.

He outlined the beginning of the scheme, the difficulties in obtaining restrictions and careful administration made it a successful arrangement.

He also told of the arrangements in Germany, whereby the insurance was not to be paid out to any other insurance, and where it was not possible to exploit it.

Defence Springs Surprise in George Kuzyk Trial

NO EVIDENCE IS OFFERED BY COUNSEL

Case is Given Over to Jury Thursday Afternoon

The jury began with the returning of a verdict in four charges against George M. Kuzyk—two of conspiracy and one of breach of trust—and one of assault with intent to kill, at 1:15 p.m. on Thursday, whereupon Mr. Justice W. C. Ives adjourned court until 5 p.m.

Mr. Justice Ives, the counsel and His Lordship had addressed the jury. Slightly more than an hour was required for the address, and the verdicts were given.

James J. Pravely, of the attorney general's department, was the first to review the case.

He reviewed each of the four incidents in detail against Kuzyk.

CLAIMED KUZYK GUILTY

Circumstances surrounding the formation of his conspiracy, the incidents in the case, and the inner workings were given by Mr. Pravely. He also claimed that Kuzyk had been charged with assault with intent to kill him and that a verdict of guilty was to be returned.

Mr. W. Miller, of counsel for defendant, had not substantiated the charges and contended that much of the information was given him by the work of his client. He had been the work of the police, he said, and the information on the ground of the charges had not been proved.

He then asked the court to give the jury points of law and in turn took points from the prosecution and added them, giving both legal construction and proper legal argument.

Anticipating a surprise for which neither legal nor lay circles were apparently prepared, defense counsel for Kuzyk had prepared for the eventual court before Mr. Justice W. C. Ives and jury, offered no evidence in the case, and then, before His Lordship, crowned it as the case in which he had been found guilty.

The defense, it was known, had 13 witnesses ready to go into the stand, conclusion, counsel for accused elected to confound themselves to argue nothing.

As a result the case will be given over to the jury.

In other words, no defense counsel will have the opportunity of adding his own points of law to the case, instead of before, as is the case when in a criminal hearing, defense is off the record.

COMMENCES ADDRESS

When the court comes in at 10 a.m. on Friday, Mr. Justice J. Pravely, of the attorney-general's department, rises and commences his address to the court, the burden of which is to be followed by Mr. W. Miller and R. F. Jackson.

After this, His Lordship was due to sum up the evidence, charge in jury and then retire.

In all Kuzyk was charged on five charges, two of which were of breach of trust and one of assault with intent to kill.

Just prior to adjournment on Wednesday, the defense had agreed to the case one of the conspiracy charges, thus leaving four charges in all to be disposed of.

The trial commenced on Tuesday, Oct. 21, and has been continuing each day since.

It is likely the jury will retire by Thursday afternoon to consider the verdict.

Lang Convicted Of Conversion

Angus Lang, formerly Justice in the Bernard block, was convicted by Mr. Justice B. B. Boyle in the criminal court on Wednesday of the charge of conversion of $16 collected by him for rent and was remanded until Friday for sentence.

In passing judgment, His Lordship said he could not believe Lang could have any other honest conclusion than he is guilty beyond any possible doubt.

P. G. Thompson, the R.C.M. counsel for accused, had argued that Lang was of clear intent. The defense, however, said Mr. Thompson, on city relief, as he had been, was better to have him out of court.

Edward R. Gogwilt, K.C., appeared for the crown.
